The concept of 'Lichting' is simple: the best academy graduates of one year in one catwalk show. In the audience are the most important people for the next step in their careers. Fashion journalists and influential stylists who are ready to spot the next big thing. CEO's and design managers on the look-out for talent and the all-important players-behind-the-scenes, all eager to see what the nation's academies have brought forth this year.

Since 2007, the Lichting Prize has been the Netherlands' top annual industry award given to a graduating student in fashion design. The concept is simple: the best students from the nation's academies present their work to the critical fashion press and the industry in a group show. A winner is chosen by a select group of industry professionals and an international panel.

This year's panelists include Stefan Siegel (founder and director, Not Just a Label), Alexander Fury (fashion editor, The Independent), Maarten van der Horst (designer) and Robb Young (strategic fashion consultant and journalist). Lichting is a project of Amsterdam Fashion Week, HTNK Fashion Recruitment & Consultancy and The New Institute with G-Star Raw.
